

Single Jurisdiction in Northern Ireland.

Background

The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service public consultation "Redrawing the Map: A Consultation on Court Boundaries in Northern Ireland" contained proposals to replace the current rigid statutory framework of court boundaries for County Courts and magistrates' courts with a single jurisdiction within Northern Ireland underpinned by more flexible administrative arrangements. Stakeholders broadly welcomed the proposals.

Single Jurisdiction reforms will be implemented on 31 October 2016. The legislation to give effect to the single jurisdiction is contained in Part 1 of the Justice Act \(Northern Ireland\) 2015. Under the new arrangements, the jurisdiction of county courts and magistrates courts will no longer be determined by reference to County Court Divisions and Petty Sessions Districts. Instead these courts will exercise jurisdiction throughout Northern Ireland, similar to the way in which the Crown Court already operates.

New Administrative Court Divisions

The existing divisional structure will simultaneously be replaced with three new Administrative Court Divisions (ACDs). These Divisions will not define jurisdiction but rather will determine the area in which court business will 'usually' be heard. The three ACDs are:-

North Eastern Division
South Eastern Division
Western Division.

A map illustrating the geographical make-up of these Divisions has been attached at Annex A.

Although the legislation provides that different ACDs may be created for different types of court business (e.g. police or Public Prosecution Service boundaries for criminal business; Health Trust boundaries for family business) there will in the first instance be one single configuration of ACDs based on combinations of the eleven Local Government Districts for Northern Ireland. This may change in the future following due consideration of the operational impact of a single configuration and its impact upon key service providers and users.

The Listing Direction of the Lord Chief Justice

The Lord Chief Justice has now completed a consultation exercise on his proposed listing direction to operate within a single jurisdiction. You can access the consultation document by visiting www.courtsni.gov.uk and clicking on “Lord Chief Justice Direction: Single Jurisdiction” in the “Key Matters” section. The court venues where cases will be listed will follow the final directions which will shortly be issued by the Lord Chief Justice for Northern Ireland, and will include how cases may transfer from one court venue to another.

We do not envisage that the introduction of single jurisdiction will result a significant shift in business: the vast majority of business will continue to be routinely listed at the current location. However, the new arrangements will afford additional flexibility to list business in a different Division where the judge (or the Lord Chief Justice) determines that there is good reason to do so. The Office of the Lord Chief Justice will wish to monitor the impact of a single jurisdiction following commencement in October and the Lord Chief Justice may choose to further revise his Listing Direction. The introduction of bespoke arrangements for particular types of business (e.g. family business; weekend and public holiday courts; pilot court initiatives etc) is likely to be phased in.

Administrative Court Division Guide

To assist you in identifying the the appropriate ACD and venue for each court tier from 31 October 2016 we have created an ACD Guide for your convenience which is attached at Annex B. Each ACD is sub-divided into new local government district, district electoral area and ward and indicates the venue where the case may be listed for hearing by court tier. Listing court business is a judicial function and as such the Guide will always be subject to judicial discretion.

In order to assist you identify where casework should be sent for processing from 31 October an enhanced ACD Guide will be made available on the NICTS website. To use the on-line guide you will need to enter the name of the ward within which the relevant address is situated. A link to the NISRA

NINIS' post code search tool will also be available should you first need to search for the ward in question. This can be done by entering the relevant postcode. However, it is anticipated that in the majority of cases business will continue to be listed at current court venues and therefore the impact of this change should be minimal

Every effort has been made to ensure ACD's mirror the new local government districts however there are a small number of exceptions where, for business reasons, it has not been practical to do so. Court users will be expected to satisfy themselves that the appropriate ACD has been selected in which to submit documentation from 31 October 2016. However single jurisdiction provides for the transfer of business between divisions and the Listing Direction sets out the criteria to do so.

Please note there are transitional and saving provisions within the legislation which mean that the changes will not invalidate any proceedings which are already commenced or ongoing when the new arrangements come into operation. In the short term where errors are made NICTS staff will endeavour to forward documentation to the correct court venue.

What impact will Single Jurisdiction have?

There will no longer be County Court Divisions or Petty Sessions Districts and all relevant court documents have been amended to reflect this. The words "County Court Division of..." And "Petty Sessions District of....." will no longer appear on any court order or other documentation as court templates have been adapted. An example of what amended orders may look has been attached at Annex C for guidance purposes only. As such court users should also review such references on documents to be lodged in court and make the necessary adjustments. NICTS understand that the transition to a single jurisdiction will take time and as such documentation bearing references to county court divisions and petty sessions districts will continue to be accepted at this time.

A large volume of legislation has also been amended to reflect the new provisions and will come into effect on 31 October also. There will continue to be Clerks of Petty Sessions and Chief Clerks whose designated authority will now extend to all Administrative Court Divisions.
